

Aric Johnson is a licensed social worker, counselor, motivational speaker and mentor who is passionate about helping people live lives to their fullest potential. Drawing from his own personal experiences related to drug addiction, incarceration, and various other struggles, Aric allows his life to be an “open book” showing that it is truly possible to achieve positive life transformation... one quality decision at a time.

Aric specializes in providing hope and direction to those who have lost their way, and bringing peace of mind to those who find themselves in the middle of crisis situations. He has had the privilege of serving disadvantage populations such as homeless men and women, individuals suffering with mental illness, those recently released from incarceration, and at-risk youth, including those already involved with the criminal justice system. As a social worker, Aric is committed to community activism and social justice, especially advocating on behalf of those affected by poverty and discrimination.

Aric holds a Bachelor’s Degree in Sociology from Georgia State University, a Master’s of Social Work from Kennesaw State University, is a certified anger management specialist, and founder of One Eighty Counseling and Coaching. Aric currently holds a position of National Coordinator for Strategic Partnerships for Cure Violence Global. In his free time, Aric enjoys all things sports-related, especially football, and is a huge Georgia Bulldog and Green Bay Packer fan.