

Solomon Middleton-Williams is the Deputy Director of the Newark Community Street Team. He has over 15 years of experience in the health and human services and public policy fields and continues to be a strong advocate for equal housing for all. Before his appointment as Deputy Director of the Newark Community Street Team, he served as the Regional Resident Services Coordinator with Community Housing Partners, a housing developer specializing in affordable housing to home ownership for low income residents. He recently founded his own company, Grace Solution Services , helping to build organizational capacity, with common sense solutions. He is also on the Board of Directors of Elite Mentoring Collective in Providence, Rhode Island, a non-profit program built to improve the lives of young men, ages 7-24.